Notes:

1. Completion rate for each program is calculated by dividing the number of graduates by the number of students available for graduation. The number of students available for graduation is determined by the number of students that started the program and are scheduled to graduate within the published program length. A majority of Capital Bible College students are part-time students and finish their program of study outside of the published program length.
2. Capital Bible College's programs of study do not lead to employment which requires passage of a state licensing examination.
3. Although Capital Bible College does not provide employment placing assistance and cannot guarantee employment to any students or graduate, any employment opportunities made known to the faculty and staff will be kept in an "Employment Opportunities" binder in the CBC office. All students will have access to the binder. Students are responsible for checking the binder and following up with inquiries. CBC cannot promise or predict employment for students.
